

Workplace Personality Inventory™ - II

Assess work styles and soft-skills to match candidates to the job and reduce turnover

The Workplace Personality Inventory - II offers insights into people's interpersonal attributes and work styles that give HR professionals the ability to predict how candidates are likely to perform in the job, to screen out those who would likely have bad fit within the organisation or team, and identify the best candidates for a particular job.

The Workplace Personality Inventory II assessment is aligned to the work styles taxonomy included in O*NET.

Therefore, recruiters can refer to O*NET descriptions to determine work styles requirements for a wide range of occupations, and then easily measure candidates' level of fit for the job.

The assessment also provides a development report that will help new hires with their own self-awareness and can guide their direct managers to support them effectively - particularly during the first 90 days on the job.

From the candidate's experience perspective, the Workplace Personality Inventory II offers high face validity as the items are work related and work relevant.

"Because the assessment identifies traits such as cooperation, dependability and concern for others, it really fit into the culture we were trying to build."
