Introduction

This report provides information about a candidate’s potential fit for the position of industrial/technical sales representative within the manufacturing industry. Industrial/technical sales representatives who work in the manufacturing industry typically perform the following activities:

- Influence customers to buy technical products and services through sales presentations, product demonstrations, trial installations, etc.
- Conduct discovery with customers to understand their equipment or product needs and business requirements
- Provide support to customers on the operation and maintenance of equipment/machinery
- Stay informed about existing and emerging technologies, including competitor offerings

This report includes information on the candidate’s potential to perform these types of activities, based on an assessment of the candidate in two key areas:

- Mechanical Aptitude - the ability to understand and apply mechanical principles
- Work Style Compatibility - the match between work behaviors and job requirements

Research by the Department of Labor has found that mechanical aptitude and the work styles measured in this assessment are important for successful performance as an industrial/technical sales representative. Industrial/technical sales representatives with a high level of mechanical aptitude are able to quickly learn and effectively apply mechanical principles on the job, enhancing their credibility with clients and overall performance. Similarly, industrial/technical sales representatives with certain work styles (e.g., persistence, initiative, stress tolerance) are able to meet the demands and expectations of the role.
